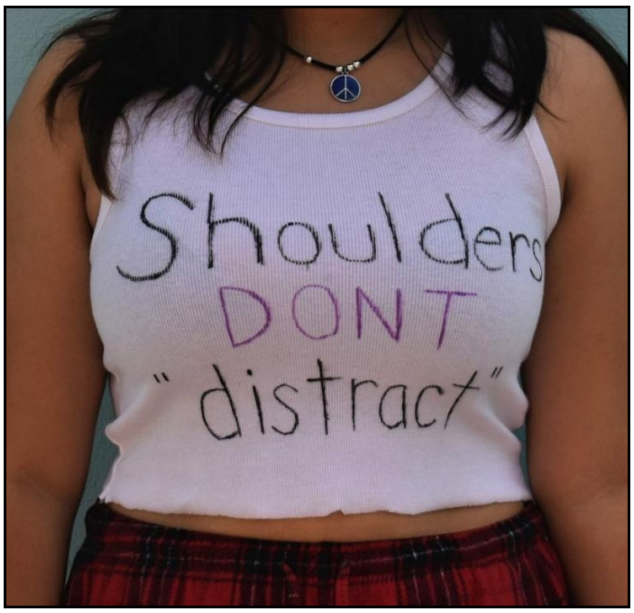
WARCRY WEDNESDAY

OCTOBER 6, 2021



Jupiter High students bring awareness to dress code policies

By Payton Gottlieb and Maddy Torres

Jupiter High students have been speaking out about the school's dress code since the beginning of September.

They are opposing certain policies, like no rips in jeans above the knees or no spaghetti straps, by putting up flyers in school restrooms, posting on social media and wearing shirts with sayings about the dress code. According to the students, they feel the dress code is biased and tends to punish more females than males.

"It's unfair how we can't wear tank tops around the school when it's 90 degrees outside," Melanie Lizama, senior, said.

To read the rest of this story and more visit:		Follow us on Instagram !
jupiterwarcry.com		@jupiter.warcry

Designed by Ryan Preisendorf

Question of the Week

Mark your calendar!
Homecoming is October 16th.
Are you planning to attend?

Answer the question on our Instagram

@jupiter.warcry

Results from last week:	Yes	85.7%
	No	14.3%

Gianna Grieco's

Photos of the Week

Through the Lens

By Olivia Gilbert

DM @jupiter.warcry on IG for your artwok to be showcased next Wednesday

New tardy rules put students' parking passes at risk

By Jason Dobuler, Managing Editor

Jupiter High School administration is cracking down on tardy students in the morning with a new set of rules. These rules came into effect Sept. 29.

The first time a student is late in the morning, their parking pass is temporarily taken. The second time, it is permanently taken.

"We have an overabundance of students that are coming in late," Joe Lang, an administrator at JHS who oversees parking passes, said. "On contract, it was five tardies [for a pass to be revoked]. We'll stick with that for second through seventh period, but for first period you get one free chance and after that, you don't get it back."

Before the rule change, the cut-off for tardies was 7:40 a.m.

Read the rest

Designed by Ryan Preisendorf